
Research consultants required

We are a thriving international consultancy seeking experienced research consultants to support the work of our dynamic and highly motivated team

The Health Policy Partnership (HPP) is an independent research consultancy, based in London, working with partners across the health spectrum to drive the policy and system changes that will improve people's health (see here for more information). Our company is growing rapidly, and we require experienced research consultants to support the work of our talented team.

Our portfolio covers a wide range of topics, often focusing on chronic disease and strategic health system challenges. Projects tend to be multidisciplinary and multi-sectoral in nature, involving collaboration with leading clinicians, patient groups, policymakers and research organisations at a national, European and international level.

Research consultants will be expected to undertake desk research, interviews, policy analysis and writing, working independently but under the direction of an HPP project lead.

We are looking for excellence in policy research and writing

- ✓ A PhD or Master's in health policy, public health or a related field plus at least five years' additional research experience including conducting high-quality literature reviews, with a keen eye for hierarchies of information and potential limitations in available data
- ✓ Proven experience of translating desk research, interviews and policy analysis into highly credible, impactful narratives which communicate a case for change among a target audience, most notably among policymakers
- ✓ Extensive experience of undertaking qualitative interviews and synthesising data gathered from these with literature review findings
- ✓ The ability to work closely with leading experts on a given topic (especially clinicians, policymakers and patient advocates), earning their trust and engaging them in co-creating final outputs
